MRS. A. W. HICKLIN,
PHYSICIAN AND ELECTRICIAN,
No. 66 Front street, (up-stairs), one door north of Kingsley's Brick Building.
MRS. HICKLIN WILL CURE ALL ACUTE, NERVOUS, and Chronic Diseases with Electricity and Water, without the use of medicine, and will apply the Electricity according to Prof. W. H. Wells' theory. Mrs. H. is experienced in the practice of medicine, but has done almost entirely away with its use, believing that ELECTRICITY IS THE ONLY SAFE REMEDIAL AGENT for the Cure of Disease. Medical men generally suppose that there are many causes for the various diseases in existence, and that one disease may have various causes in nature to produce it. We contend that there is but one grand cause for all disease, and this is a loss of balance of the two forces of Electricity in the part or parts diseased.
We apply the current with strength and never shock the patient, and would have you bear in mind that we have a set of Prof. Wells' Dual Secretic Electro-Galvanic Batteries, and can purify the blood; remove mercury from, build up and give tone to the system. We can Cure the worst cases of Rheumatism, Sore Eyes, Deafness and all other curable diseases that the human family is subject to. When the common part of society say they have no faith in women, [illegible] we do not require any faith, but just give it a trial. You need not ask your physician if it will do you any good, for he knows nothing about the use and practice of one of Prof. Wells' batteries.
We are prepared to Board and Lodge those who come for treatment, and will spare no pains in supplying the best livable fare. We will require terms of board invariably in advance. All communications in regard to treatment, should be addressed,

Are State Military Bonds Constitutional?

The rebels of Oregon, their sympathisers and co-workers, have been saying that the act of the last Legislature granting bounties to the soldiers was unconstitutional. The last Legislature of California passed a similar law, giving still greater pay to volunteers than our State has done. The validity of the act has been tested in the Supreme Court of California, and held to be constitutional. On the point in question the Constitutions of the two States are alike, excepting that in California the amount of indebtedness allowed, is greater than in Oregon. We give the California decision, wherein the constitutionality of the act is sustained by lucid and cogent reasoning. The advocates of repudiation will soon be rebuked of, and confounded by, the absurdities to which they have committed themselves. The case which follows is to be found in 2d Cal. Rep., page 174.

Franklin vs. the State Board of Examiners.

Crocker, J. delivered the opinion of the Court, Norton, J. concurring, and Cope, C. J., concurring specially.

This is an application for a mandamus to compel the defendants to audit and allow a claim to the bounty of five dollars per month allowed by the act of April 27th, 1863, "entitled an act for the relief of the enlisted men of the California Volunteers in the service of the United States." The Court below refused the mandamus and the plaintiff appeals.

The respondents contend that the act in question violates the eighth article of the State Constitution and is therefore void. The portion of the article applicable to the present case reads as follows: "The Legislature shall not in any manner create any debt or debts, liability or liabilities, which shall singly or in the aggregate, with any previous debts or liabilities, exceed the sum of $300,000, except in case of war, to repel invasion or suppress insurrection," etc. The act in question provides for the creation of a debt which may amount to $600,000; and it is admitted that the indebtedness of the State at the time of the passage of the law greatly exceeded the constitutional limit of $300,000. These facts would render the act invalid unless it is saved by the exception in Art. 8.

It is contended by the appellants that the present condition of the Nation is evidence that the exigency exists, provided for by the exception, and, therefore, the act is valid; while on the other hand the respondents insist that there is nothing in the condition of our National affairs which authorize the law. In arguing this question, various constructions of this exception have been suggested. One is, that the power of the Legislature to create debts is unlimited only in cases where a war exists in the State, or where there is an invasion or threatened invasion of the State, or where there is an insurrection within its boundaries. Another is, that it applies in all cases where a war or insurrection exists in any part of the United States, or there is an insurrection or threatened invasion of any territory within the National jurisdiction. It is also [illegible] that it applies only to repelling invasions of the State, or suppressing insurrections within its boundaries in time of war. We do not deem it necessary to investigate this question, or to attempt to give an exact or definite construction of the terms thus used in the Constitution. The evident intention was to impose limitations upon the general power of the Legislature to create debts, leaving them free, however, from such restrictions in great emergencies caused by war, an invasion, or an insurrection. In such cases, the Legislature should be left free to exercise their judgment and discretion upon the subject, answerable alone to the people for any abuse of the power. The exercise of the power is purely a political question, and they in whom the legislative power of the State is vested, are the sole judges as to the existence of such emergency. It is the exercise of a purely political subject, in no manner of a judicial character, and it is not, therefore, subject to review or liable to be controlled by the judicial department of the State. The legislature is therefore, the proper judge of the construction to be given to the constitution upon this subject.

In the exercise of their rightful authority they have decided that the exigency has arisen demanding the exercise of the power and they have directly declared that the object of the law and the debt created by it, is "to aid in repelling invasion, suppressing insurrection, enforcing the laws and preserving and protecting the public property;" and this decision cannot be reviewed or set aside by this court.

In the case of Luther vs. Borden (7 How. U. S. 1,) it was held that the decision and determination of matters of a political character by the executive or legislative departments of the Government was binding on every other department, and could not be questioned by a judicial tribunal. The dangers and difficulties which would grow out of the adoption of a contrary rule are there clearly and ably pointed out. The National Constitution declares that Congress shall have power "to provide for calling out the militia to execute the laws of the Union, suppress insurrections, and repel invasions," and Congress by the act of 1795, provided that whenever the United States shall be invaded, or be in danger of invasion from any foreign nation or Indian tribe, it shall be lawful for the President of the United States to call forth such number of the militia of the State or States most convenient to the place of danger as he may judge necessary to repel such invasion." It was held that this power to provide for repelling invasions includes the power to provide against the attempt and danger of invasion as the necessary and proper means to effect the object. It was also held that although the power is in its terms limited and confined to cases of actual invasion, or imminent danger of invasion, yet the authority to decide whether the exigency has arisen belongs exclusively to the President and that his decision is conclusive upon all other persons. There is no provision for any appeal from the decision of the President.

But even if it was necessary for this court to decide whether or not war exists in the country and that the emergency had arisen, justifying the exercise of the power, there is sufficient in the condition of our national affairs, to sustain the position that the emergency existed, which justified the Legislature in passing the law. It is a matter of public history, that eleven of the State Governments have organized a new Confederacy of States, which they have called the "Confederate States of America," and under this new and unconstitutional organization, they have levied war against the United States, and for nearly three years, have prosecuted direct and open hostilities against the national and many of the State Governments, with all the force and their power. The fact that an insurrection exists, and that these hostilities are conducted by persons owing allegiance to the National Government, who are therefore, rebels and traitors, renders it none the less a war. One part of the constitutional definition of treason is, that it consists in "levying war against them," that is, the United States. It is none the less treason because the rebels have lived under a pretended national organization. A traitor cannot escape the punishment of his crime by adding thereto the further use of creating or acting under a governmental organization and committing his treasonable acts under its pretended authority. Still, however this may be, the hostilities in which the nation is engaged are none the less war, whether carried on against [illegible] or not.

The fact that the rebels have never invaded this State can make no difference, for they are waging war against the nation of which the State is a component part, and which we are equally interested with each and all the other States in sustaining. Whatever affects any one part of the nation equally affects us. The success or defeat of the national Government is equally our success or defeat. It is therefore the duty of the State to aid the national Government, when necessary, to the full extent of its means and ability. The Legislature is the [sole] judge of the necessity and the extent to which aid should be rendered.

Not only does the public history of the times establish the fact of the existence of war, but various acts of Congress providing the means for prosecuting it and the proclamations of the President of the United States, especially those of September 22d, 1862, and January 1, 1863, recognize the existence of war, and prescribe rules regulating it (12 U. S. Stat. at Large, 1269 [illegible]).

Our conclusion is, that the law in question is constitutional, and that the court below erred in refusing the mandamus. The order to that effect is therefore reversed, and the court below is directed to order a mandamus to issue as prayed for by plaintiff.

Farming and Mining.

It is gratifying to all who feel a real interest in the prospects of this State, both to observe the considerable improvements that have of late been making in the manner of farming, and also to notice the increase in the quantity of agricultural products which our State affords. But though there has been a marked advancement in the direction of good farming during the past few years, yet it cannot be said that the pursuits of agriculture are now conducted in a manner creditable to most who are engaged in them. Systematic farming is, however, being gradually substituted for the neglectful, unmethodic way in which this business was formerly carried on, and the results of the change are very observable in the quantity and quality of products that appear in our markets. It deserves to be made the object of especial study to ascertain how further improvements may be made in the way of conducting that business which is the basis of our future prosperity. There are many obstacles to be overcome before agriculture in Oregon can be brought to such a degree of perfection as the interests of the State demand. The country is yet new and sparsely populated; considerable portions of our best lands are far removed from navigable waters, and transportation over new roads is extremely difficult. Farming throughout the state has not yet generally acquired the method of a scientific occupation, and opportunities for accurate information of this nature are not readily afforded here. These considerations explain, in part, why more has not been accomplished in the way of successful farming.

But none of the reasons yet advanced go to the foundation of the difficulty. The great drawback is found in the restless and roving habits of the people. Ever since the first settlement of this country there has been a disposition on the part of the people—now, however, happily abating—to engage in adventurous enterprises, in the hope of acquiring large and sudden gains. For years past there has been an annual exodus from the agricultural parts of Oregon toward the mining regions lying on our border. These spasmodic movements of a people excited by dreams of wealth, have, it is true, resulted in much good to the portions of country which they have visited [illegible] opened for the habitation of man; yet the greater number of these adventurers have derived no immediate advantage from their enterprise and labor. There are many men in Oregon who have gone to the mines year after year, hoping for gain, the only result of whose efforts has been a constant depletion of their funds. Labor has been diverted from its proper objects, and, for the most part, mismanaged or thrown away. It cannot be but that the interests of the country, particularly those of agriculture, should suffer by such processes. Vacillation in business is always hurtful. Individuals realize it, and communities may be made to feel it not less sensibly. We are glad, therefore, that there now seems to be an increasing steadiness of purpose among the several classes, and that farmers and farm laborers are devoting themselves more closely to their own occupations, leaving to miners and to such as would otherwise be unemployed, the business of seeking for gold.

Our State cannot prosper as it ought to do until there is an end to that uneasy propensity for roaming which yet prevails among the people. Without any reasonable assurance of success and almost without a shadow of rational purpose, men have quitted their homes, and in the almost idle search for sudden wealth, have rambled abroad, only to return poorer than before. Sudden fortunes have, in rare instances, been realized, and these occurrences have kept up the flagging ardor of others who hoped for similar fortune. But all cannot become wealthy, though fortune be never so propitious, yet by intelligent industry all may become thrifty and independent. It only needs that each class should follow its own proper vocation and all will prosper together.

We would not underrate the importance and value of the gold mines. It would be impossible to overestimate the advantages they confer on the whole country. Every species of industry among us is quickened by the aid they afford. The growth of the trade and the increase of the wealth of this State, during the past few years, are in great part to be attributed to the development of these mines. What we contend for is that it would be better for all the interests of the country for each class to attend to its own pursuits, and cease to be governed by the unsteady purposes which these continual shifts and changes betray.

The tendency is now toward a greater stability than heretofore, and this fact is the surest indication of the permanency of the improvements that are being made among us.

Duties of Neutrals.—In the second volume of the official digest of Secretary Seward's diplomatic correspondence, lately published, there appears under date of Nov. 14th, 1864, a letter written by Minister Adams to Lord John Russell, wherein it was urged upon her Majesty's Government to use proper endeavors to prevent the equipment of any naval force in a British port to make war on the United States. In the course of his reply, the British Secretary made the following statement:

I cannot refrain from observing that Her Majesty's Government have been far more successful in preventing breaches of neutrality with regard to the fitting out of cruisers to take part in the civil war in North America than the Government of the United States were in preventing the fitting out of ships of war to aid the South American [illegible] in their revolt against Spain, which however, then stood in the position of a central authority resisting insurrection.

Mr. Adams thereupon gave another coloring to the whole matter, by stating the facts in the case cited. It will be seen that this rejoinder embodies a very pointed hint that the British Government is expected to reimburse our own for the losses we have suffered by the connivance of the former with the rebellion:

Were it expedient at this late day to enter upon an examination of the relative merits of the two Governments in the two very widely different stages of their condition, in acquitting themselves of their obligations of neutrality under circumstances [illegible] I am not aware that

[illegible] would be arrived at would have [illegible] The ways that [illegible] United States in the instances [illegible] thereto has been made [illegible] full and free release has been [illegible] Her Majesty's Government [illegible]

A Farcical End

When [illegible] for his first proclamation [illegible] within twenty days [illegible] was received by the rebel [illegible] with [illegible] of laughter [illegible] they had adopted, and under whose [illegible] they expected to live in the full [illegible] of the rights they had at last found [illegible] to regard the command of the President as a wholly impotent one and deemed his [illegible] their dispersion the broadest farce that could be devised.

But a more complete farce than they made of that which finally turned out to be a matter of [illegible] was lately enacted in the State of Georgia. The grand magnate of the imaginary Confederacy, abandoned by all his retainers, and hunted as a fugitive from one swamp to another, was at last overtaken by his pursuers. [illegible] Where the assembled [illegible] the head of State? Where [illegible] that doth hedge" a President? Where the panoply of his power? Let us descend from such inquiries to the contemplation of his actual condition. Let us place before the imagination the spectacle of a "President" clad in feminine habiliments and endeavoring by long strides to evade his agile pursuers. But not so [illegible] to escape. Crinoline itself could not avail. The unlucky display of his booted leg, caused by his hasty flight revealed the disguised chief of a "nation" which had long boasted of its invincibility, and which was the only true type of "civilization" among degenerate men.

The climax is at last reached. Never again [illegible] the ridiculous or the farcical be sought in vain. A "President" in woman's apparel, running with the speed of Achilles, yet [illegible] Achilles did run! The end of the drama is as farcical as its beginning and middle were tragical. Yet, after all it was a fitting end to a scheme whose irrationality throughout has had no parallel in the history of the world.

A Mania for "Compromise."—The Copperhead papers still adhere with a wonderful pertinacity, to the idea of compromise. Their devotion to it amounts to a positive hallucination. When [illegible] was threatened by the rebels if the people should persist in electing whom they pleased for President, these lackeys of Southern aristocracy insisted that a "compromise" should be effected by which the right to make such a choice, should be renounced. Failing in this, when the war was actually begun, they still insisted on "compromise" on the plea that "coercion was unwarranted." Next the nation was urged to agree to a "compromise," because the "South could never be subjugated." Now that this has proved false hope, "compromise" is again invoked, and with more than common urgency, on the ground that there must be a tender of magnanimity to the fallen. It may be gravely doubted whether the Democracy will ever be cured of this delusion. The mania for compromise [illegible] party is wasting away. Yet with that infatuation so prevalent among all who suffer from aberrations of intellect, the poor [illegible] themselves only are sane, and that their wiser countrymen are gone stark mad. The deluded [illegible] seem to be beyond all human aid.

Brutal Outrage at the Dalles.

Dalles, May 18, 1865.

Editor Oregonian:

Permit me through the columns of your paper to inform the citizens of this county that on the night of Saturday, May 13th, as Mr. T. B. Kelly, a well known druggist of this city, was returning home from town, he was waylaid by two men [illegible] beaten with clubs [illegible] Mr. Kelly's screams and cries for assistance were, most fortunately for him, heard by a friend of his, who had just before parted with him, and rushed towards the assassins shouting to them to desist. As he neared them they fled, leaving their unfortunate victim in a [illegible] covered with blood and wounds. He was removed to his residence and is [illegible] but being a strong man it is hoped he may survive. Kelly was able [illegible] his assailants and gave their names as [illegible] Fitzgerald and Michael Fitzgerald, two brothers merchants of this city. They were arrested the following day. The only cause that [illegible] for the deed is envy and a [illegible] and well nursed personal hatred. We have a public journal in this place, but for some reason unknown to the writer, it has withheld these facts from the community.

Hoping you will give the above an insertion in your paper, I remain yours respectfully,

WM MORTON.

A late number of the Idaho World contains the following:

A note of the suicide in Placerville, last week, was forwarded to us by our correspondent, but by the rising of the streams it was delayed too late. [illegible] we learn that it was committed at the Empire Hotel by one Jacob Haynes. He shot himself in the head with a pistol. He had just arrived from [illegible] and was supposed to be laboring under temporary insanity, when he committed the act. He leaves a family in Mill Creek Township, Wallace county, Ohio, where he has resided for the past sixteen years. He is a native of Pennsylvania.

A train belonging to D. W. Douthitt & Bro., bound for this place, was captured by the Indians on the 27th of April, while camped for the night near Olds Ferry, on Snake river. Between thirty and forty mules were driven off during the night. The freight train was saved. A company of men started [illegible] shortly after toward the Malheur river in pursuit. A band of horses were also driven off from Miller's ranch about the same time, and also a portion of another pack train.

Much damage has been done to creek claims. The levee erected a [illegible] to turn the water to the west side of the channel, has broken and many valuable [illegible] are covered with sand.

Mining at Placerville has commenced in earnest and we soon shall have stirring news from [illegible] one lucky miner at [illegible] from which he took eighteen hundred dollars [illegible] days.

Philadelphia, May 14.—The subscriptions to the 7-30 loan yesterday, was thirty and a half millions. Total sales for the week was ninety-eight millions.

Foreign.

New York, May 11.—The steamer from Southampton the 3d has arrived.

In the House of Lords, Earl Russell moved an humble address to the Queen, expressing the sorrow and indignation of that house at President Lincoln's assassination and praying that these sentiments be communicated to the American Government. He said the Queen had written a private letter to Mrs. Lincoln, expressing the deepest sympathy for her irreparable loss.

Earl Grey, consequent on Lord Palmerston's illness, moved and seconded similar motion in the House of Commons. The demeanor of Parliament was in the highest degree impressive.

Mr. Adams presided at a meeting of Americans in London, to express their sorrow and indignation.

CURED THOUSANDS!

And it will Cure You!

"A Cough is generally the effect of a Cold, which has either been improperly treated or entirely neglected. When it proves [illegible] there is Always reason to fear the consequences, as this shows a weak state of the lungs, and is often the forerunner of Consumption."—Buchanan's Domestic Medicine.

STOP THAN COUGHING

is really the VERY BEST remedy ever compounded for the cure of Coughs, Colds, Sore Throat, Asthma, Whooping Cough, Bronchitis and Consumption. Thousands of people in California and Oregon have been [illegible] by its surprising curative powers.

WHAT KILLED HIM!

Dr. Hall in his "Journal of Health," speaking of the death of Washington Irving, asks the above question, and adds "He might have remained with us [illegible] years to come, had it not been for advice, kindly intended, no doubt, but given in thoughtlessness and reckless ignorance.

He Had a Cold!

Which, by some injudicious prescription, had been converted into asthma." Let me say to Dr. Hall that that "prescription" was not

THEODORE [illegible]KERSON

Effects of Novel Reading — On the whole the verdict must, we think, be in favor of the novels, though with more reserve than is quite the fashion to make. The objection rests, we think, upon two assumptions, neither of which is more than partially sound: that the evils produced by reading are confined to novels, and that there is no positive good to counterbalance the possible ill result. Any exclusive system of reading is undoubtedly injurious to any half disciplined mind. Give a girl of fifteen nothing but history for two or three years and her judgment will be one as distorted as if she had passed the time in reading the wildest romances. She will not, it is true, imagine heroes with yellow whiskers and wild words of worship, but she will invent historic personages with charms they never possessed, grow enamored of the great deeds occasionally performed, and consider no man worth anything but those who resemble the exceptional and over colored personages upon whom her mind has dwelt. It is as ill to long for Sir Philip Sydney as for Charles Lovelace. Miss Young in one of her books, we think, the "Heir of Redclyffe," puts this effect very well when she makes her heroes sympathize strongly with a wild rage into which the hero puts himself because Charles I is attacked. There are hundreds of girls in England who feel criticism on Charles Stuart as they feel criticism on their brothers, who believe that feeble intriguing Italianesque grandson of Rozzio to be a Paladin and martyr. They may as well worship John Halifax as their ideal Charles Rex.

Exclusive reading of history is in England at at least infrequent, but exclusive reading of theology is not, and its effect is at least as bad as that of the novels. There is nothing more pitiable in the world than the condition of an English girl nourished on the pabulum provided in some households,—on religious biographies, and tracts about the soul, unable to move for fear of committing some sin, with a conscience debauched by confusion between things indifferent and things sinful, with finger placed perpetually on her religious pulse. A woman may as well neglect all her duties while waiting for the hero with yellow whiskers, as neglect them while waiting the emotion which she believes will accompany conversion; but far better become discontented through hunger for the novelist's life, than despairing because convinced she can never be forgiven by Heaven. The diseased conscience is as unhealthy as the diseased imagination, and produces much worse results. The Exaltation is rather less admirable than the Isabel Sleaford. Many people can recall the result of a similar devotion to music, a conviction that all real life was insipid compared with the ideal life evoked by the glorious combination of sounds. The mischief is not the kind of reading but the exclusive devotion to one kind, no matter what its object or its active machinery. Poor Mr. Weaver in running down Burnes and Shakspeare thinks he is simply doing his duty. He is ignorant of the great fact, true of mental as of bodily physiology, that the constant eating of one dish, however wholesome or however simple of itself, produces disease; that the contempt which he thinks so self denying and so grand, is merely a symptom of mental indigestion. If he looks at the sun only for ten minutes he will be able to see nothing else, but his sight is not the better for that.

Mary Queen of Scots. — The annals of the world furnish us affecting examples of the instability of human conditions. But the whole history of mankind does not perhaps furnish a greater, a sadder reverse, a more appalling contrast than Mary at sixteen and Mary at forty five. At the former period a being upon whom nature seemed to have showered her choicest gifts, the loveliest person, a fascinating mind,—the bride of the heir apparent to the crown of France—the heir apparent to the throne of England—the Queen of Scotland, with the whole of the Catholic powers of Europe her allies, one with whom a veteran statesman delighted to converse, and in praise of whose charms the poets of the age contended. At forty five, worn by disease—her frame, though not her noble spirit, broken by a long a severe and merciless captivity—proclaimed as an adulteress and a murderess—forsaken by her friends, execrated by her subjects and disregarded even by her own child, condemned, after a mock trial, to an ignominious death. She might exclaim in the words of the holy "Is it nothing to you, all ye that pass by the way? Behold and see if there be sorrow like my sorrow."

FINANCIAL AND COMMERCIAL.

WEEKLY REVIEW.

PORTLAND, May 19th, 186[illegible]

Bullion is arriving in considerable quantities [illegible] expected there will be a large amount available for shipment by the steamer of Monday. Gold is still going down in New York, and as a consequence gold [illegible] upward. The [illegible] is encouraged by the prospect of a decline in gold exports from California, as tending more to the benefit of home industry by remaining and developing resources which will add materially to the wealth of the State.

The mining stock market is decidedly flat here as elsewhere.

Operations in exchange, we are informed [illegible] for the Panama steamer sailing from San Francisco to-day, have been on a rather limited scale. Sterling has been done at 45½ per cent, which is equal to 110[illegible] coin drafts 111 [illegible] premium more being charged on Monday [illegible] [illegible] Jacket [illegible] currency [illegible] at 25 to 30 [illegible] cent, and telegraphic transfers [illegible] premium. Transactions at the Stock Board for the week have been dull, [illegible] a large amount of legal tender notes sold at 76@77c.

The markets generally continue very much [illegible] especially in grain and produce [illegible] limited. As to prices we cannot speak with any degree of certainty of the ruling figures [illegible] Receipts daily are light, but still, with no outlet, the market [illegible] [illegible]

There is still [illegible] feeling in the San Francisco market, which [illegible] There wheat, flour, [illegible] continue to drag and it is unsafe to ship.

Trade with Victoria continues light. The steamer Geo. S. Wright is now in port and will receive a cargo for that destination [illegible] [illegible] Butter prime [illegible] cents [illegible] Potatoes [illegible]

Wool is still coming in lightly, but the market is yet unsettled and undeterminated [illegible] at 20c, but the ruling figures have been from 18c to 19c per lb for the [illegible]

ALLEN'S LUNG BALSAM!

The Remedy for Curing

CONSUMPTION, COUGHS, COLDS, Asthma, Croup,

Diseases of the Throat, Bronchitis, Pains and Oppression of the Chest and Lungs, Difficult Breathing and all the Diseases of the Pulmonary Organs.

ITS ACTION IS EXPECTORANT, ALTERATIVE SUDORIFIC, SEDATIVE, DIAPHORETIC AND DIURETIC, which renders it one of the most valuable remedies known for curing diseases of the lungs. It excites expectoration and causes the lungs to throw off the phlegm or mucus; CHANGES THE SECRETIONS AND PURIFIES THE BLOOD, heals the irritated parts, gives strength to the digestive organs; brings the liver to its proper action, and imparts strength to the whole system. Such is the immediate and satisfactory effect that it is WARRANTED TO BREAK UP THE MOST DISTRESSING COUGH IN A FEW HOURS TIME, if not of too long standing. IT IS WARRANTED to give entire satisfaction even in the MOST CONFIRMED CASES OF CONSUMPTION. IT IS WARRANTED NOT to produce costiveness (which is the case with most remedies) or affect the head, as it contains no Opium in any form. IT IS WARRANTED TO BE PERFECTLY HARMLESS to the most delicate child, although it is an active and powerful remedy for restoring the system. THERE IS NO REAL NECESSITY FOR SO MANY DEATHS BY CONSUMPTION when ALLEN'S LUNG BALSAM will prevent it, if only taken in time.

Sold by all Druggists. Price $1 per bottle.
